

Fishing for a Better, Healthier Educational Experience for Kids

Marysville, WA --- Meet this football and fishing fanatic who puts family first, while working tirelessly to ensure students throughout the northwest learn in quality, healthy classrooms. Patrick Allen joined Pacific Mobile nine years ago and prides himself on the success of the SAGE \(Smart Academic Green Environment\) project, simply because he knows it is best for kids. This dad, husband, coach and friend would not want anything less than the finest for his two young children or his nieces or nephews, therefore he pours his heart and soul into the project he has been a part of since its inception.

The proud alumnus of Oregon State University enthusiastically cheers for the Beavs, as well as the Seahawks! The PMSI Major Projects Sales Representative exudes enthusiasm in all he does. Patrick's modular construction career started the moment he walked across the stage, earning his degree, in Corvallis, OR and straight into the business world. Pacific Mobile luckily convinced him to make the move to start the New Year as a member of its team in January, 2007. It works out well, enthusiasm is one of the company's values. Otherwise, it would be tough for Patrick to simply sit quietly and do his job; as he says, "I like to keep the mood in the office light by singing a Barry Manilow song or slapping high fives after a big sale."

Patrick's future looks bright at Pacific Mobile and his dreams do not end selling just one classroom at a time. Allen says, "In the immediate future, I would like to see the development of the SAGE Classroom into a full-blown campus." And, as long as this Sales Representative is dreaming, he figures why not take that enthusiasm to the next level (or two), "Other than that I'll take Garth's job (CEO), if he gets bored!," Allen adds.

Be on the lookout for a school campus near you. SAGE classrooms continue popping up around the northwest. By the fall of 2016, more than 50 will seat Kindergarten through 12th graders, thanks in large part to this enthusiastic Sales Representative who builds trust with his kindness, from the moment you meet him.
